Saying goodbye to the dogs we love is like saying goodbye to a member of the family. After filling our lives with so much loyalty and affection, they can suddenly be taken from us and the loss is especially hard to bear.

Remembering what we shared

One way of processing the grief that we feel is through remembrance. We might choose to frame a favourite photograph, lay ashes in a meaningful place or as TV presenter, Ben Fogle likes to do, hang Christmas biscuits on the branches of a tree under which his dogs' ashes are scattered.

Whatever we do to remember our four-legged friends, the gesture is often deeply personal. It reflects the relationship we were lucky enough to share with our dog and the memories that were made together.

Roll Of Honour

For many dog lovers, featuring their pet on our Canine Companions Roll of Honour is a great way of commemorating the time they spent with their dog. What's more, our tribute page offers a way of honouring your dog's life, by changing the fortunes of another one. Whether your gift contributes to the discovery of new treatments in canine medicine or veterinary fees for a dog who has been removed from an abusive home, it can bring hope and healing to another dog's life.

Make a gift

For a gift of £100 or more, you'll be invited to feature your loved one and a special message in Our Canine Companions Roll of Honour. Simply make your gift using the 'Donate' button on our website and send your tribute message of not more than 30 words and picture of your dog to fundraising@kennelclubcharitabletrust.org.

PETE - My beautiful boy...everyone who met you fell in love with you, I miss my shadow. You were noisy, clumsy and so, so loving. All my love.

'Adding Pete's name to the Roll of Honour felt like I was meeting the challenge of loss with the gift of hope. It's comforting to know that his memory is contributing to the fantastic work being done by canine rescue centres across the country.'
